

Are you thinking about a PhD in Mathematics and/or Statistics?

Come along to a free Open Day about
PhD research in Mathematical Sciences
in London and Kent.

Saturday 27 November 2010

12pm onwards

Wellcome Collection

183 Euston Road, London NW1 2BE

All are welcome and booking is free

Presentations by Steve Noble (Brunel), Clare Dunning (Kent) and Giovanni Montana (Imperial)

Representatives include:

Peter Cameron, Shaun Bullett and Barbara Bogacka (QMUL)

Frank Smith and Tom Fearn (UCL)

Alastair Young (Imperial)

Norman Biggs and Sara Geneletti (LSE)

Giuseppe Tinaglia (King's College, London)

Oliver Kerr (City)

Igor Smolyarenko and Paresh Date (Brunel)

Lei Zhong (Royal Holloway, University of London)

Talks will be on new and highly active current research, and there will be Q&As and the opportunity to chat with staff from the nine member institutions.

Register your interest now by emailing office@ltcc.ac.uk

so we can make sure you receive a detailed programme nearer the time.

Attendance is free, a buffet lunch will be provided and full funding for travel within the UK to attend the event is available for students (subject to conditions).

The event is organised by the London Taught Course Centre (LTCC) and sponsored by EPSRC and the Lighthill Institute of Mathematical Sciences.